

Identropy Announces Identity Management Managed Service Offering

Identropy launches Identropy Managed Service (iMS), a management tool to outsource the monitoring, management, reporting and remediation of client identity management systems.

(PRWeb) December 6, 2007 -- Today, Identropy announced Identropy Managed Service (iMS), an offering for identity management infrastructures. iMS allows clients who host their own identity management systems to outsource the monitoring, management, reporting and remediation of the infrastructure to Identropy's identity management experts. As clients continue to invest in identity management technologies in order to automate business processes and demonstrate compliance to regulatory measures, the need for a formalized maintenance program has become pertinent.

iMS provides clients near real-time view into the health of their identity management infrastructures, error alert messaging, approvals based remediation, and provides clients with weekly reports detailing the health and audit reports of who has accessed their identity management administration consoles.

Identropy's CEO, Victor Barris urges companies to leverage iMS in their environment. "The iMS Portal Dashboard will prove invaluable to clients who are seeking an increased level of transparency into the administration of their identity management infrastructures. Furthermore, clients who require an identity management platform in their infrastructures but are wary of the administrative burdens associated with managing it can rely on iMS for the complete outsourced management and monitoring of their on-premise identity management systems."

iMS is priced based on a monthly subscription fee. For more information, contact Identropy at info@identropy.com.
